S4E Case Challenge

With the S4E Case Challenge we are planning a first cross-border highlight that brings together students from 5 countries of the CEE region. You will have the chance to work on real life cases from our partner companies and present your recommendations to the managers actually involved. The participants will be invited to Vienna, where the competition will be held from November 2nd-4th, 2011.

Three weeks prior to the case challenge we will hand out cases from Erste Group, OMV, Vienna Insurance Group and Wolf Theiss for the first round. Participants will then prepare their recommendations on their own and present them to a jury consisting of managers from all our partner companies on the first day of the S4E Case Challenge in Vienna.

The best participants qualify for the final, where they will work on another case in international and interdisciplinary teams. Great prizes as well as internships and places in assessment centers for trainee programs are waiting for the winners!

We are looking forward to three days of international networking, cross-cultural experience, passionate work on exciting cases and of course great fun! So apply for a students4excellence membership now and register for the S4E Case Challenge!

What our members say.

Through the mentorship-program I got in touch with an experienced leader in the field that I want to specialize in, gaining invaluable advice for my future career. I can recommend students4excellence to anyone who wants to broaden his horizons.

Ulrich Kopetzki Law

Students4excellence is an essential and enriching complement to my studies: Exclusive and committed partner companies, interesting events and discussions, action-packed leisure activities, motivated students and great parties.

Elisabeth Wagner Business Administration / Medicine

What I like the most at students4excellence is the multidisciplinary of the network - I am able to meet students that study totally different subjects, ranging from economics, natural & social sciences to journalism or dramatics.

Melanie Sindelar Cultural and Social Anthropology / Business Sciences

Facebook, Twitter, and Co are prominent social networks, where students spend a lot of their time telling the world what touches them. But nothing compares to face-to-face discussions with distinguished colleagues, joined social activities, and personal contact.

How to get in.

For the admission to the programme the overall impression on all four dimensions is important. So a weakness on one dimension can be balanced through extraordinary achievements on another dimension. The four dimensions in order of their importance to the application are:

1. Academic Excellence

Academic excellence shows willingness and commitment to performance. It comprises sound average grades (grade point average) and quick study progress.

2. Practical Experience

First practical experiences round up a good university education. Furthermore internships with challenging duties in renowned companies show commitment to work on the own career in an early stage.

3. International Experience

In globalized economy international mobility is of high relevance. Language skills and the willingness to work abroad and explore other cultures are prerequisites for an international career. For us International mobility is documented by exchanges semesters or internships abroad and language skills.

4. Commitment

Future managers should also show passion in other areas than the university or internships. It's about the drive to make a difference - whether in political organizations, social or cultural initiatives or competitive sport.
